PENALTY RATE ON WHEAT LISTED

The Department of Africulture has determined the 1959 penalty rate on excess wheat under the wheat marketing quota program to be $1.07 per bushel, according to W. D .Hix, III, chairman of the Appomattox ASC County Committee.

Mr. Hix commented that this rate is equal to 45% of the parity price of wheat as of May 1, 1959, as required by existing law and regulations. The parity price for wheat as of May 1 was $2.37 per bushel.

By way of explaining the applicability of this penalty rate to individual farms, Mr. Hix offered this additional information. Under the present wheat marketing quota program no marketing quota penalty is due on any farm growing 15 acres or less even though a smaller allotment may have been computed for use in determing price support eligibility. For those farms with allotments of more than 15 acres, any acreage above the allotment is considered excess acreage. Also, for farms with allotments of 15 acres or less, but harvesting more than 15 acres, any acreage above the allotment is considered an excess acreage. A marketing excess is determined based on the normal yield for the farm times the number of excess acres. The marketing excess thus determined is multiplied by the $1.07 penalty rate to determine the marketing quota penalty on excess production.

Mr. Hix states further that there are 22 excess cases where penalty is involved. The deadline date for disposing of excess wheat to avoid penalty is June 1, 1959 .

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATION

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Wooten, of Spout Spring were honored guests Sunday, May 24, when their children, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Jennings, and Mr. and Mrs. Williamson Wooten were hosts to a Golden Wedding reception in celebration of the couple's 50th wedding anniversary.

The decorations and refreshments reflected a golden wedding note.

Mr. and Mrs .Wooten were married May 23, 1909, in the Methodist Parsonage at Appomattox, with the Rev. W. L. Murphy as celebrant. Mrs. W. T. Nash, Mrs. Lora Mitchell and Mr. W. L. Williamson, of Appomattox, who were wedding guests attended the celebration. Mrs. Wooten is the former Nora Williamson, of Appomattox.

All of Mr. Wooten's brothers and sisters and the couple's six grandchildren and five great grand-children, along with 150 other guests attended the celebration.

DRAFT BOARD CITES LATEST RULES

(The draft has been extended for four years, until July 1, 1963. This means that the young men of the country must continue to expect to serve in the military forces. This series of articles outlines the basic responsibilies and rights of young men under the draft law.)

This is the sixth article in the series.

Physicians, dentists, and allied specialists are liable for induction under the same conditions as are other registrants. But special provisions apply to them.

A registrant who receives a professional degree in these fields is required to report that fact to his local board as inforamtion affecting his classification.

Virtually every medical or dental student is deferred to complete his studies. This extends liability to age 35.

The law provides authority for the Secretary of Defense to requisition men from Selective Service to be selected by their qualifications as physicians or dentists.

Authority also is provided for ordering to active duty without their consent, physicians and dentists who are members of the Reserve.

These provisions provide the machinery through which the Armed Forces obtain adequate numbers of physicians and dentists. Young physicians and dentists are influenced to apply for commissions and to serve two years on active duty in a commissioned status. So long as sufficient numbers seek commissions, it is not necessary for the Department of Defense to request physicians and dentists through the Selective Service. If applications for commissions decline, then a requisition for physicians and dentists probably would prompt those selected for induction to seek commissions and enter service as commissioned officers on orders to active duty from the Reserves.

In cooperation with the Department of Defense the Selective Service System defers young physicians in the Defense Department's residency training program to provide the specialization required in the Armed Forces.

Decreased Seed Flow By Insecticide Treatment May Decrease Crop Stands

Decreased flow of seeds through drills (planters) rather than reduced germination may be the cause of poorer stands from seeds treated with insecticides.

Agricultural experts at VPI pass along this news from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, which, with Oklahoma Experiment Station scientists, has worked on the question. The tests showed that chemical treatment, which puts a slight coating on each seed, reduces the rate of flow through the drills, so fewer seeds per acre are planted.

Farmers are advised to adjust seed drills and to enlarge the opening in the seed hopper floor to increase the flow of seeds through the drills.

The cooperating scientists treated wheat seed with aldrin, dieldrin, and Thimet insecticides to control brown wheat mites and false wireworms.

Laborutory tests of treated and untreated seeds showed no difference in the rate of germination.

The scientists found the test weight of treated seed to be between 2 and 3 pounds less per bushel than the weight of untreated seed .They also found that the kind and amount of insecticide used to coat the seeds affected the rate of seed flow. The seed flow variation obtained under different rates of treatment ranged from 9 to 21% below that of untreated seed.
